

Richard T. Doermer

Richard Doermer entered the finance industry when he was asked to put together a group of financiers to purchase Dime Bank. Once under the new ownership, Doermer took active charge of Dime Bank and his success in the industry continued.

Through mergers and acquisitions, the bank changed names to Indiana Bank and Trust Company, later to Summit Bank and then NBD. Doermer retired as CEO of NBD's Northern Indiana Banking Operation in 1993.
