

Jennifer Chapman has lived and worked in Jacksonville since 1998. Currently, she serves as the Division Chair of Public Affairs for Mayo Clinic in Florida. Previously, she was with Fidelity Investments overseeing public affairs for their Florida operations and with JAXUSA/Jax Chamber as a business recruitment manager. Much of her professional career has been focused on building bridges from the private sector to the community through corporate grant-making, fundraising, volunteer engagement and legislative advocacy.

Jennifer has been involved in a number of non-profit organizations with missions focused on women and girls, leadership development, early learning and financial literacy including Leadership Jacksonville, Leadership Florida, the Junior League of Jacksonville, the Early Learning Coalition of Duval, and of course, Junior Achievement. She is currently a board member of SPAR and a new member of the Women's Giving Alliance. She has started several and run several small businesses and was the inaugural winner of the UNF Start-Up Weekend with her e-commerce business idea, P Institute. She is a past Girl Scouts of Gateway Council Woman of Distinction, and Jacksonville Business Journal Women of Influence and 40 Under 40 honoree. She was inducted into the Junior Achievement Hall of Fame in 2015 for her work with JAGirl$.

She is enjoying the "porch life" in Springfield with her husband, Josh, sons Owen, Matthew and Ben and puppy, Happy.
